• YOUNG WORKERS NEED INDUSTRIAL COOPERATION -- Trud, No 158, 7 Jul 49

The on-the-job-training system of young workers' schools has completely justified itself during the 6 years of its existence. Thousands of young men and women have obtained secondary education and many have continued their education at higher educational technical schools, becoming engineers. It is significant that of the 14,000 youths completing young workers' schools in the RSFSR last year, 90 percent entered higher educational institutions. About 370,000 persons attended the more than 2,000 young workers' schools in the RSFSR during the recently completed school year.

The 10th All-Union Congress of Trade Unions recommended that the school system be expanded, that every large enterprise establish a young workers' school by 1949 - 1950. Indications are, however, that this program is not being carried out satisfactorily, and that some plant directors are not devoting enough attention to these schools. The Soviet government, in creating this system of schools, obligated industrial enterprises to furnish the schools with the necessary equipment and quarters and to guarantee uninterrupted study activities. Many enterprise directors have failed to carry out the latter stipulation.

KHABAROVSK FZO SCHOOLS TRAIN 4,617 -- Molodoy Dal'nevostochnik, No 107, 9 Jun 49

Devkin, deputy chief of the Khabarovsk Kray Administration of Labor Reserves, speaking before the first kray conference of outstanding students of trade, railroad, and FZO schools, stated that in 1948 FZO and other schools of the kray trained 4,617 young workers for industrial enterprises. The education plan for the first half year 1949 was fulfilled 99 percent for production training and 98 percent for theoretical training.

Some FZO schools are lagging in the teaching of up-to-date technology and production organization.

3,500 GRADUATE FROM MOSCOW CONSTRUCTION SCHOOLS -- Moskovskiy Bol'shevik, No 153, 1 Jul 49

Examinations have been completed at 23 Moscow FZO construction schools. About 3,500 plasterers, masons, carpenters, cabinetmakers, and house painters have completed their courses. The graduates will work in Moscow.
